

Welcome to the Hypertrophic Olivary Degeneration Community!

This space is for patients and caregivers to share experiences, knowledge, ideas, and support. The mission of the Hypertrophic Olivary Degeneration Association (HODA) is to provide support to diagnosed patients and their community, share medically vetted and current information with our community, and raise funding to be applied to research into the disease, including but not limited to: disease origins, treatments and cures for the devastating diagnosis.

The goals of our community are to engage, collaborate, and share experiences that enhance and enrich the HOD community.

To meet the collective goals of our community, it's important that all members feel safe and supported. To help everyone have the best possible experience, please take a look at our community guidelines:

- Feel free to post questions and start discussions on any topics relating to HOD
- Treat others as you would treat them in real life
- Be polite and communicate with respect
- Respect the privacy of other community members
- Utilize ambassadors and board members for support
- Contact us directly with feedback at contactus@hodassoc.org
- Don't share posts without permission
- Don't share personal political or religious views
- Don't post irrelevant messages
- Don't post promotional content
- Personal attacks, trolling and abuse will not be tolerated
- Don't post explicit, rude or aggressive content

In the event of someone violating these guidelines, we will take action to protect other members of the group. This might include a warning or in the event of extreme or repeat behavior, the member may be banned from the community.

If you experience or witness any behavior that doesn't follow our community guidelines, please contact us directly at contactus@hodassoc.org. All reports are kept confidential.